To whom it may concern

Ernest Koh Chuang Rui (202546C) was my student at Nanyang Polytechnic when he was pursuing Diploma in Business Management (Human Resource Management & International Business).

Ernest was a conscientious and reflective student who was committed to doing well in his studies. He took pride in his work and aimed to produce work of good quality. He also displayed a strong sense of responsibility and was self-motivated to do his personal best in every academic module to achieve good results.

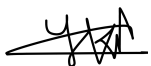

During his 24-week internship with Enterprise Singapore, Ernest was quick-witted and has shown high aptitude in business and data analytics, where he was able to pick up technical data skills fast and honed them in a fast-paced business environment. His internship supervisor described him as someone who showed great enthusiasm and a 'can-do' attitude in overcoming new challenging problems. He was able to carry out his research and solve problems independently. He also gained the confidence to approach cross-division stakeholders and able to engage them independently.

Ernest also displayed positive attributes in non-academic related areas. Ernest was part of the prestigious School of Business Management Club, where he took the key role of Treasurer EXCO. As an EXCO member, he rose to the challenge of leading the Club in the planning and facilitation of school-wide events such as Open House, Freshmen Orientation, as well as the Director's List Ceremony. Ernest also participated in competitions to stretch his limits such as the Junior Achievement (JA) International Trade Challenge.

With a heart for the community, Ernest volunteered his time to help the less fortunate through the Meals-on-Wheels initiative every weekend. He also participated actively as a student leader in the CSR initiative with the School's Teaching Enterprise Project (TEP) Centre.

Ernest distinguished himself as one of the most pleasant and self-motivated students. He combines high intellectual capabilities with strong motivation and a warm personality. Ernest is well-positioned to take on any challenges, particularly in business & data analytics, rising as a leader. This combination invariably spells professional success and is an invaluable asset wherever he goes.

Yours sincerely,
